NastasicGetty Images Car dealership games. They are something that every driver encounters when shopping for a new vehicle. While there are many honest car sellers, there are those car dealers who see nothing but dollar signs when you walk through the door. They negotiate the sale every day, so they have an advantage over the average car buyer when it comes to benefiting from a deal. 12 Signs the Car Dealership Is Ripping You Off! Don't be discouraged by the fact that car dealers are better negotiators than you. It's what they do for a living. However, according to consumer website Cheapism, there are signs to be taken to avoid being ripped off by the retailer. The disappearing financing act - Let's say you're driving home with your brand new car and thinking that the terms of the sale are final. Then you will receive a call from the dealer informing you that your on-site funding application has been rejected. You will also be informed that you will need to apply for a new loan, but at a higher interest rate than the original. This is called the disappearance financing act. This can easily be avoided by applying for a loan from an external source, preferably a bank to which you are already a member. If the dealer tells you that a particular deal is only valid for one day or that other buyers are interested in the car you are looking at, this is a sign that they are trying to throw you into a purchase. If you have any doubts about the purchase, you should not hesitate to leave. Take the time to make your decision, because it's not the only car in the world. The Low Credit Score Scam - Some traders will try to tell you that your credit score is lower than it is, so make sure you know your score beforehand. Knowing your score ensures that you are not tempted to pay higher interest on your loan. If you look at your purchase receipts, you may notice a dealer preparation fee of between 500 and 600 US dollars. It is intended to compensate the dealer for securing your vehicle, but it is a hidden add-on that you can negotiate to be removed before you sign the receipt. Promise to cancel your trade-in loan and not too - If you trade in a car where you owe money, the balance of your trade-in loan should be added to your new loan so that the trader can pay off the balance. However, some traders will keep the money owed to the bank. The best way to avoid this scam is to pay your old car before you exchange it if possible. Avoid discussions about monthly payments - Most consumers have a set number for what ready to spend on a car. Traders will try to work within this number by extending the terms of your loan, which will cost you more money. If your monthly payment for a seven-year loan is USD 400, it will cost USD 10,000 more than a five-year loan with the same monthly payment. Buy and switch with advertised deals - While car advertising offers excellent financing deals with interest, if you pay attention to the fine print, you will find that these offers are only valid for buyers with excellent credit scores. The average car buyer often finds out that he does not qualify for the best deals when he comes to the dealer. You with interest and taxes on discounts - When you negotiate the price of a new vehicle, ignore the discounts. Once you are ready to buy your new vehicle, ask the dealer to apply any manufacturer discount to the final price. Otherwise, you will receive a discount check for which you will have to pay taxes. Selling useless add-ons - you don't need any fabric protection, rust-protected or any of the other extras that traders insist on are necessary. Just say no. Hold your deposit - If you are unsure to make a final purchase, the dealer could offer to keep the car for you if you give them a deposit, usually several thousand dollars. Never give a deposit to a trader as you may not be refunded. Buying buyers into a lease - Traders often offer to reduce monthly payments and reduce the down payment requirement if a buyer agrees to make an immediate purchase. However, they often change the purchase contract with a rental contract, whereby the unsuspecting buyer is stuck with an expensive lease. Negotiate from the MSRP - What you should know about the MSRP is that it is artificially high. If the trader offers to knock 1000 dollars out of the E&A, that's not the bargain you think it is. Ask the dealer what he paid for the car and try to negotiate from that price. Things you need to know to win the auto-financing game is prepared is the best way to get a good financing deal. According to Cars.com, there are factors you should consider when financing a car: the price you pay - before you go to the dealership, you should have a conservative estimate of what you can afford. Then you should agree on a lower price to start negotiations. It also helps to have an absolute maximum amount that you are willing to pay, which should be different from what you tell the trader that you are willing to pay. Available incentives - If you rely on merchant incentives, make sure you qualify. Trade-in-value - When you trade in your car, make sure you know what it's really worth. If you feel that you can get a better deal from another trader, then try to use this as leverage. Determine how long a car has been on the LotDealers, will always try to sell you the car that has sat the longest on the property because they carry inventory. To get a good idea of how long a car is sitting in the dealership, check the manufacturer's sticker, which is in the door jam. It will tell you the month and the year in which the car was made. These are just some of the car dealership games you should keep in mind. By arming yourself with this knowledge, you should be able to buy the vehicle that will be used for you with This content is created and managed by a third party and imported to this page to allow users to provide their e-mail addresses. The next stage is the installation of a game system. There is no default method for installation, but it is possible. Once your car has a TV in it, you can load your PlayStation or Wii into your car to play on the go. The most important thing is to find a safe location for the game system in the car and a way to connect its power supply to the electrical system. Install a TV in the car if it doesn't have one. The TV requires input ports that work with your game console, most RCA composite plugs. Most car TVs go into a seat headrest; Cut a hole in the back of the headrest and fit the TV frame into it. Install the game console in a safe place. If there is enough free space, it is good under the passenger seat. You can also mount it on the dashboard if it is not within sight or in the type of airbags. Velcro-glued Velcro straps keep him in place. If nowhere else, try keeping it in the glove compartment. Connect the console to the TV using RCA cables. If the TV is inside a seat headrest, guide the cables through the seat padding. This works best when the console is under the seat. If it is in the front, route a long sans enough cable under the seat and upwards through the padding. Connect the console power supply to the car's electrical system with a DC inverter. Place the inverter in a corner of the passenger bottom plate and plug it into a cigarette adapter. Run the console power cord under the seat (or along the edge of the dashboard) and connect it to the inverter. Store your system's games and controllers in a secure container. An auto organizer from an auto supply store will work and usually mounted on each floor plate with Velcro straps. This game is for 2+ players. A person begins by saying the name of a famous person - e.B. Thomas Edison. The person clockwise of them says a person whose first name begins with the same letter as the last player's last name, e.B Elton John. Names cannot be repeated. If you want a simpler version, use fictional characters. (Bugs Bunny) So it goes on, Jessica Simpson - Stephen King - Kevin Rudolf - Richard Nixon - Nick Jonas - Until... Someone with a double letter - e.B. Jesse James by Nick Jonas. At this point, double letters reverse the direction. This can be done again and again like -Stephen Spielberg - Sally Struthers - Susan Sarandon and so on. -- This can be turned into a tournament: a candy bar. A winner. Play as normal, but if someone can't think of a name, they're out. Narrow it to a person like this, and the winner will get the candy. Candy. Candy.
